Doing business with Germany

Top tips working with German event buyers and organisers

- Pre-arranged appointments are mandatory and should be made two months in advance to enable you to plan your travel around Germany. Most meetings are formal and initial meetings are used to get to know each other. Meetings tend to adhere to strict agendas, including starting and end times.

- It is more usual to set up virtual introductory meetings prior to meeting in person.

- German buyers are spread out all over the country so we recommend that you target buyers city by city to keep travel time to a minimum.

- Many buyers work from home so it is best to check where they would like to meet before booking your trip.

- Communication tends to be formal and you should expect written communication, both to back up decisions and to maintain a record of decisions and discussions. Following the established protocol is critical to building and maintaining business relationships. Once a firm business relationship has been established it is appropriate to relax rules and to become more informal.

- Business often is hierarchical and decision-making is held at the top of the company. Final decisions are translated into comprehensive action steps.

- Make sure your sales material is available in both English and German and that you use the metric system when describing meeting spaces alongside capacities.

- In German business, a person’s word and handshake are considered his/her bond. If a verbal agreement is made in a business meeting, it is generally considered binding.

Top trends in Germany:

- MICE bookings from Germany tend to come from agencies specialised in this market or corporates. They mainly book meetings & incentives or meetings that include team building activities.

- German buyers tend to book short trips with 2-3 day duration in Europe. Direct flight routes and air capacity strongly influence destination choice – particularly where not all air routes have been re-established following the pandemic.

- Buyers consider the attractiveness of the region / city when choosing a destination for their event. They also consider potential business reasons to travel to a region, e.g. visiting a branch office, access to local customers.

- German agencies book both with suppliers directly and through DMCs – the latter normally with German speakers.

- Group sizes tend to be less than 100 passengers due to airline capacity limits for group bookings on European airlines.

- Events tend to take place in the Spring and throughout the Autumn. Sun or snow destinations appeal in the Winter months.

- Sustainability is increasingly important to all German buyers – please ensure this is included in all collateral and proposals.

- German agencies expect a speedy replies to their requests (within 24 hours).
