1. Key findings

1.1 Overall trends in visits to English attractions 2008-2009

As in 2007, 2008 reported rainfall well above average across England, particularly during the summer months. August reported particularly low levels of sunshine.

- The 2008/9 winter period saw colder than average temperatures, with significant snowfall for many areas in February. However, rainfall was significantly below average;
- Spring 2009 was generally warm and sunny, with temperatures and sunshine levels some of the highest on record for the period. Rainfall was also below average;
- Summer 2009 recorded rainfall levels well above average, particularly in July and to a lesser extent, August (June was drier). The combined 2007-2009 summer periods delivered the highest rainfall of any consecutive three year period since records began;
- The autumn period was characterised by warmer than average temperatures (although not particularly sunny), with rainfall below average in September and October. However, November was very wet with some areas reporting rainfall twice the average.

The 1,806 England visitor attractions that provided visit figures for both 2008 and 2009 reported a +5% increase in visitor admissions overall in 2009. This was a notably stronger increase than in each of the past three years (+2% in 2008 and +3% in both 2007 and 2006).

The trend towards domestic overnight stays and away from overseas trips is likely to have contributed towards this strong increase. United Kingdom Tourism Survey data for 2009 reported an increase of +8% in overnight staying trips made by England residents within England. Conversely, International Passenger Survey data for 2009 reported a year-on-year decrease in visits abroad of -15%.

The table below illustrates that there has also been a strong trend towards day trips, with attractions reporting an +8% increase in visitors who live locally/within day trip distance in 2009. Visits to attractions made by overseas residents have also held up (+2% in 2009), despite International Passenger Survey data which reported that visits to the UK made by overseas residents for holiday or visiting friends/relatives purposes declined by -3 in 2009.

Table A.2 England visit trends 2008-2009 - by attraction category (%)

Category	Attractions sample	% 09/08
Country parks	45	+2
Farms	58	+6
Gardens	106	+10
Historic houses/castles	342	+12
Other historic properties	111	+1
Leisure/theme parks	35	+1
Museums/art galleries	600	+3
Steam/heritage railways	29	+7

Wildlife attractions/zoos	88	+2
Workplaces	52	+2
Places of worship	103	+6
Other	162	+9
England	(1,806)	+5

All categories showed growth in 2009, with the most striking increases observed for historic houses/castles (+12%). This is consistent with findings reported by the quarterly England Attractions Monitor throughout 2009 and represents a significant shift from the static visits position observed over the past few years. Gardens (+10%) also reported a double digit percentage increase, despite another summer of wetter than average weather.

Museums/art galleries reported a more modest +3% increase, significantly lower than the +7% reported in 2008 (driven to an extent by the stellar performance of museums/art galleries in the North West as a result of Liverpool Capital of Culture 2008).

Places of worship continued to recover well, reporting strong increases in visitor admissions of +6% in 2009 and +5% in 2008. The years immediately prior to this were a period of more modest increases, which in turn followed years of declining admissions.

Visits to both farms and visitor/heritage centres have shown significant growth in recent years and this trend continued in 2009, visitor admissions to farms increasing by +6% in 2009 and to visitor/heritage centres by +5%.

Table A.3 England visit trends 2008-2009 – by admission type (%)

Admission	Attractions sample	Increase	No change	Decrease	% 09/08
Free	(711)	56	18	27	+3
Paid	(1,095)	70	6	24	+7
England	(1,806)	64	11	25	+5

In a departure from recent years, visits to paid attractions (+7%) increased at a notably stronger rate than visits to free attractions (+3%). The increase in paid attraction visits was driven ostensibly by strong increases in visits to historic houses/castles and to gardens. With visits to museums/art galleries (many of which are free) increasing at a more modest rate in 2009, the rate of increase in visits to free attractions was significantly more limited.

Table A.4 England visit trends 2008-2009 - by geographic location (%)

Geographic location	Attractions sample	% 09/08
Coastal	(220)	+3
Rural	(860)	+7
Urban	(643)	+3
England	(1,806)	+5

Heavily influenced by the increase in visits to historic houses/castles and gardens in 2009, rural attractions reported the strongest increase in visits at +7%. In recent years, urban attractions had delivered the most significant increase in visitor admissions, led by London (and in 2008, North West – driven by Liverpool Capital of Culture) and museums/art galleries, with these also tending to be situated in urban locations. The more modest increases reported for London attractions (+3%) and museums/art galleries in 2009 limited the increases in visits to urban attractions.

Visits to coastal attractions also picked up in 2009, increasing by +3%, following a -1% decline in 2008.

Table A.5 England visit trends 2008-2009 – by volume of visits (%)

Volume of visits	Attractions sample	% 09/08
10,000 or less	(672)	+3
10,001-20,000	(248)	+8
20,001-50,000	(319)	+8
50,001-100,000	(226)	+9
100,001-200,000	(149)	+8
Over 200,000	(192)	+3
England	(1,806)	+5

The trend for visits to migrate towards the larger attractions was somewhat arrested in 2009, with visits to attractions with over 200,000 visitors per annum increasing by only +3%. To an extent, this was driven by a ‘corrective’ decrease in visits to a number of large attractions in the North West, particularly museums/art galleries – reflecting the Liverpool Capital of Culture 2008 event. A number of other large, free national museums/art galleries also reported notable decreases in visits in 2009.

Visits continue to increase at a slower rate among the very smallest attractions with annual visits of 10,000 or less, although visits in 2009 did increase following a slight decline reported in 2008.

Table A.6 Overall visits trends 2008-2009 - by English Government Office Region (%)

Region	Attractions sample	% 09/08
North West	(176)	-1
North East	(93)	+6
Yorkshire/The Humber	(184)	+4
East Midlands	(194)	+9
West Midlands	(156)	+5
East	(258)	+6
London	(108)	+3
South East	(335)	+10
South West	(302)	+6
England	(1,806)	+5

Following the very strong increase in visits to North West attractions of +13% in 2008, driven by the Liverpool Capital of Culture 2008 event, a 'corrective' decline in visits of -1% was reported in 2009. Given this very significant rise in 2008, this small decrease in 2009 might be considered a positive performance, with visits still significantly up on 2007.

The South East delivered a double digit increase in visits of +10% in 2009, driven by strong increases in visits to historic houses/castles and gardens. The high concentration of members of heritage organisations in the South East and the trend towards local visits may have impacted upon this notable increase.

With its proliferation of rural and coastal attractions, each of which performed well in 2009, the South West also reported a notable increase in visitor admissions in 2009 (+6%) following small declines in both 2008 and 2007. Attractions in both the South East and South West were perhaps well placed to benefit from the trend towards domestic breaks in 2009, United Kingdom Tourism Survey data indicating that both areas received higher than average increases in staying visitors in 2009.

Overnight staying visits to the East of England region grew at the highest rate in 2009 and, to an extent, this has also been reflected in a notable growth in visits to its attractions (+6%).

Visits to East Midlands attractions increased significantly above the average in 2009, by +9%, although this was driven by increases to a relatively small number of large attractions within the region.

London reported more modest increases in visitor admissions of +3%, reflecting United Kingdom Tourism Survey figures which showed that leisure domestic visits to London did not increase at the rate reported elsewhere in England in 2009.

1.2 Overall trends in admission prices 2008-2009

Table A.7 Adult admission prices 2008-2009 (paid admission) – by category (%)

Category	Attractions Sample	Average adult charge		% 09/08
		2008	2009
Country parks	(9)	£5.04	£5.09	+1
Farms	(23)	£5.35	£5.57	+4
Gardens	(71)	£5.22	£5.38	+3
Historic houses/castles	(264)	£5.93	£6.18	+4
Other historic properties	(65)	£4.14	£4.31	+4
Leisure/theme parks	(6)	£12.77	£13.03	+2
Museums/art galleries	(150)	£4.24	£4.42	+4
Steam/heritage railways	(15)	£6.83	£7.11	+4
Visitor/heritage centres	(13)	£4.73	£4.88	+3
Wildlife attractions/zoos	(36)	£8.45	£8.89	+5
Workplaces	(10)	£6.23	£6.36	+2
Places of worship	(9)	£6.04	£6.56	+8
Other	(53)	£10.00	£10.10	+1
England	(724)	£5.96	£6.21	+4

Adult admission charges to paid attractions increased by an average of +4% in 2009 compared with +5% in 2008. As in 2008, increases were not dissimilar across most attraction categories. Places of worship reported increases in admission charges well above average, although the low sample sizes within this category should be noted.

As in previous years, other historic properties reported the lowest average admission charges at £4.31, with museums/art galleries also significantly less than the average. The highest average admission charges were recorded for leisure/theme parks (£13.03), wildlife attractions/zoos (£8.89) and steam/heritage railways (£7.11).

Admission charge increases were similar across all regions with the exception of London attractions, which reported a significantly above average increase of +11%.

1.3 Overall trends in gross revenue 2008-2009

Table A.8 Gross revenue trend 2008-2009 – by English GOR (%)

Region	Attractions sample	Up	Similar	Down	% 09/08
North West	(158)	42	40	18	+4
North East	(85)	52	32	16	+11
Yorkshire/The Humber	(156)	61	29	10	+8
East Midlands	(169)	48	42	10	+6
West Midlands	(128)	59	31	9	+15
East	(242)	50	33	17	+5
London	(88)	44	36	19	+10
South East	(291)	57	30	13	+11
South West	(260)	56	26	18	+9
England	(1,577)	53	33	15	+8

In line with strong increases in visitor admissions, gross revenues were also reported to have increased significantly; by an average of +8% in 2009 compared with +5% in each of 2008 and 2007 and even beyond the levels recorded in 2006, 2005 and 2004 (all +7%).

The proportion of attractions reporting a decline in gross revenue in 2009 also fell significantly, from a quarter (26%) in 2008 to just 15% in 2009. This is the lowest proportion of attractions reporting a decline in any of the past five years – 2007 (19%), 2006 (20%), 2005 (21%) and 2004 (22%). Conversely, over half (53%) reported an increase compared with 38% last year and 47% in each of the previous two years.

Despite visitor admissions declining slightly in 2009, gross revenue for North West attractions increased by +4%. Whilst the smallest increase of all regions, this nevertheless perhaps demonstrates the lasting legacy of the Liverpool Capital of Culture 2008 event – both visitor admissions and gross revenue significantly up on 2007.

Despite the lower than average increase in visitor admissions to London attractions in 2009, gross revenue increased by more than the national average (by +10%). This perhaps reflects the greater than average increase in admission charges at London attractions in 2009.

However, gross revenue increases were highest overall in the West Midlands, whose attractions reported an average increase of +15%. Only 9% of attractions reported a decline in gross revenue, the lowest of all regions.

Table A.9 Gross revenue trend 2008-2009 – by attraction category (%)

Category	Attractions sample	Up	Similar	Down	% 09/08
Country parks	(42)	60	36	5	+5
Farms	(60)	60	25	15	+9
Gardens	(91)	65	23	12	+11
Historic houses/castles	(262)	68	23	10	+13
Other historic properties	(99)	61	25	14	+13
Leisure/theme parks	(35)	69	20	11	+29
Museums/art galleries	(506)	37	43	20	+4
Steam/heritage railways	(35)	77	17	6	+12
Visitor/heritage centres	(77)	55	35	10	+13
Wildlife attractions/zoos	(74)	61	26	14	+8
Workplaces	(50)	48	34	18	+6
Places of worship	(83)	31	49	19	+2
Other	(163)	61	26	13	+8
England	(1,577)	53	33	15	+8

Across the different attraction categories, the variation in gross revenue reported was again significant in 2009, ranging from +29% for leisure/theme parks to +2% for places of worship. Reflecting the strong performance of historic houses/castles in 2009, gross revenue for these attractions also increased significantly above average - by +13%.

Gross revenue for museums/art galleries was up by just +4% in 2009, reflecting the lower than average increases in visitor admissions. A fifth (20%) of museums/art galleries experienced a decline in gross revenue, a higher proportion than any other attraction category.

1.4 Marketing expenditure trend 2008-2009

Table A.10 Movement in spend on marketing – by attraction category 2008-2009 (%)

Category	Sample	Increase	Similar	Down
Country parks	(42)	12	76	12
Farms	(60)	33	60	7

Wildlife attractions/zoos	(75)	32	52	16
Workplaces	(53)	19	64	17
Places of worship	(87)	17	77	6
Other	(160)	24	64	11
England	(1,581)	21	68	11

Note: percentages read across

Little has changed since 2008 in terms of the proportions of attractions increasing or decreasing their marketing expenditure. One in five (21%) attractions indicated an increase in marketing spend in 2009 11% a decrease. This was very similar to that recorded in the past five years:

- 2008 (21% recorded an increase and 11% a decrease)
- 2007 (22% recorded an increase and 12% a decrease)
- 2006 (24% recorded an increase and 11% a decrease)
- 2005 (25% recorded an increase and 10% a decrease)
- 2004 (25% recorded an increase and 13% a decrease)

Leisure/theme parks (39%), steam/heritage railways (34%), farms (33%) and wildlife attractions/zoos (32%) were all significantly more likely to report marketing spend increases than the national average.

Conversely, country parks (12%), other historic properties (14%), places of worship (17%) and museums/art galleries (18%) were least likely to have increased their marketing spend in 2009 – as was the case in 2008. Historic houses/castles appeared to have increased their visitor admissions without a significant proportion increasing their marketing spend in 2009, only 18% reporting that their expenditure in this area had increased since 2008.

Table A.11 Movement in spend on marketing – by English GOR 2008-2009 (%)

Region	Sample	Increase	Similar	Down
North West	(159)	28	62	11
North East	(85)	20	69	11
Yorkshire/The Humber	(157)	16	70	14
East Midlands	(169)	17	72	11
West Midlands	(127)	20	70	9
East	(241)	21	68	11
London	(90)	27	62	11
South East	(292)	17	72	11
South West	(261)	25	63	13
England	(1,581)	21	68	11

Attractions in the North West (28%) were most likely to have increased their marketing spend in 2009, perhaps seeking to ensure that the success of 2008 be sustained in the absence of the Liverpool Capital of Culture 2008 event. Attractions in both London (27%) and the South West (25%) were also more likely than average to have increased their marketing spend, as was also the case in 2008.

2. Introduction and background

This report presents the findings of the Survey of Visits to Visitor Attractions undertaken in England by VisitEngland. The report provides a comprehensive England-wide analysis of trends plus visits data for individual attractions. Separate reports are produced by the national tourist organisations of Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland.

Visitor Attraction Definition

For the purposes of the survey, the definition of a visitor attraction is:

“..an attraction where it is feasible to charge admission for the sole purpose of sightseeing. The attraction must be a permanently established excursion destination, a primary purpose of which is to allow access for entertainment, interest, or education and can include places of worship (but excludes small parish churches); rather than being primarily a retail outlet or a venue for sporting, theatrical, or film performances. It must be open to the public, without prior booking, for published periods each year, and should be capable of attracting day visitors or tourists as well as local residents. In addition, the attraction must be a single business, under a single management, so that it is capable of answering the economic questions on revenue, employment etc.”

2.1 Research objectives

The purpose of the survey is to monitor trends in the visitor attraction sector in England and to improve understanding of the dynamics of the sector. The findings contribute to regional and national estimates of the economic impact of tourism and inform regional development and planning work. The results of the survey allow operators to benchmark their operation within their category, within their region and across the sector as a whole.

2.2 Survey method

Following a successful trial for the 2008 survey, attractions were again given the option of online survey completion in addition to the postal self-completion survey. All attractions for whom email contacts were held were sent an email invitation to take part, with a link to their attraction’s online questionnaire. Attractions not responding were subsequently sent a postal questionnaire alongside attractions for whom no email contacts were held.

Response to the online option was again notable, with a significant proportion of all responding attractions choosing to complete the survey online. Intrinsically linking the survey with the quarterly England Attractions Monitor (the related online survey providing rapid feedback to the industry on visit trends and attitudes) using a single online platform has undoubtedly continued to increase participation in both this survey and the England Attractions Monitor.

A copy of the questionnaire used can be found in Appendix 2.

BDRC Continental holds the contract for the survey in England and is responsible for the preparation of this report.

It is important to highlight that major individual attractions can have a significant impact upon the proportion of visits within each region and attraction category. Their participation or non-participation in the survey year-on-year can result in significant fluctuations in the data within each region and attraction category.

2.3 Population, sample and response rate

6,845 English visitor attractions were invited to take part in the 2009 survey. 1,932 English visitor attractions provided visits figures for the year 2009, an effective response rate of 28%.

Given that the value of this report lies predominantly in the assessment of trends over time, perhaps the more important sample size measure is the number of attractions providing admissions information for both 2009 and 2008. This response rate is increasing - in 2009 there were 1,806 such attractions, significantly higher than the equivalent number in 2008 (1,684) and 2007 (1,348).

A further 362 attractions (5%) responded but did not take part in the survey as they were either closed, could not provide visit figures for lack of information, they did not consider themselves to meet the definition of an attraction, or they did not wish to participate in the survey.

Table 2.1 Response rate by attraction category

Category	Number of attractions surveyed	Number of attractions that provided data	Effective response rate
Country parks	260	52	20%
Farms	212	64	30%
Gardens	523	111	21%
Historic properties	1276	461	36%
Leisure/Theme parks	195	39	20%
Museums/Art Galleries	1933	642	33%
Steam/heritage railways	119	35	29%
Visitor/heritage centres	229	81	35%
Wildlife attractions/zoos	501	90	18%
Workplaces	404	56	14%
Places of worship	522	117	22%
Other	671	184	27%
Total	6,845	1,932	28%

Response rates within the two attraction categories which account for over half of all English attractions – museums/art galleries (33%) and historic properties (36%) – were above average. Visitor admissions data provided at Head Office level by English Heritage, National Trust and the Museums, Libraries and Archives Council have made a significant contribution to these levels of response, particularly for the key larger attractions.

Response rates were also high among visitor/heritage centres (35%). Wildlife attractions/zoos (18%) and workplaces (14%) recorded the lowest response rates.

Guide to the tables

Confidentiality

Visit figures for individual attractions do not appear in this report if the attraction operator did not authorise them for publication. Data provided by operators who requested confidentiality is included in the aggregated calculations. 380 attractions requested that their visit figures remain confidential in 2009 compared with 397 in 2008, 398 in 2007 and 376 in 2006.

Estimates

If operators have stated their visits are estimates in 2009, this is clearly indicated in section 10 with an 'E' following the number of visits.

Admission

Tables in section 10 include the charging status of each visitor attraction. 'F' indicates that admission to the main attraction is free of charge. However, it should be noted that some free attractions may charge for entry to particular parts of the attraction or special exhibitions. Where an attraction charges admission for the main attraction element, the adult admission price is noted (if provided by the attraction in the 2009 survey).

Symbols

In the table, an asterisk is used to indicate a percentage is less than 0.5%. A plus or minus sign indicates whether the value is positive or negative. NA (not available) indicates that the sample base value is too low to allow robust analysis of the data.

Sample Base Values

Please note that throughout the report the base values in the tables may not necessarily sum to the total sample size due to respondents leaving questions unanswered.

3. England visit trends 2008-2009

This chapter analyses trends in the number of visits to English attractions that provided data for both 2008 and 2009. 1,806 English visitor attractions taking part in the survey provided visits figures for both 2008 and 2009.

The 1,806 English visitor attractions that provided visits figures for both years reported an average increase of +5% in 2009, the highest annual increase observed since 2002 (when attractions were in the process of recovering from the impact of the Foot & Mouth epidemic and September 11th).

The trend towards domestic overnight stays and away from overseas trips is likely to have contributed towards this strong increase in 2009. United Kingdom Tourism Survey data for 2009 reported an increase of +10% in overnight staying trips made by England residents within England for the purposes of a holiday or visiting friends / family. Conversely, International Passenger Survey data for 2009 reported a year-on-year decrease in visits abroad of -15%.

There has also been a strong trend towards local visitors, with attractions reporting a +8% increase in visitors who live locally/within day trip distance in 2009. Visits to attractions made by overseas residents have also held up (+2% in 2009).

Annual percentage changes by year are presented below:

Year	%
2008	+2%
2007	+3%
2006	+3%
2005	-*%
2004	+1%
2003	+2%
2002	+8%

In 2005, London attractions were badly affected by the July bombings in the capital which led to an annual decline in visits of -5%, resulting in a slight national decline of -*%. In the intervening years, growth returned to at a level around +2% or +3% per annum.

Commensurate with the increased rate of growth in visitor admissions in 2009, the proportion of attractions reporting an increase in visits has also increased sharply. 64% of attractions reported an increase in visits in 2009 compared with just 46% in 2008, 51% in 2007 and 48% in 2006.

Other	(162)	64%	15%	21%	+9
England	(1,806)	64%	11%	25%	+5

All attraction categories showed growth in 2009, with the most striking increases observed for historic houses/castles (+12%). This is consistent with findings reported by the quarterly England Attractions Monitor throughout 2009 and represents a significant shift from the static visits position observed over the past few years. Over three-quarters (77%) of historic houses/castles in England reported an increase in visitor admissions in 2009.

Gardens (+10%) also reported a double digit percentage increase, yet again thwarting another summer of wetter than average weather. 80% of gardens reported an increase in visits in 2009. Farms also continue to increase visitor admissions rapidly, growing by a further +6% in 2009, following an increase of +8% in 2008 and strong increase in previous recent years.

Museums/art galleries reported a more modest +3% increase, significantly lower than the +7% reported in 2008. Visit increases at a national level were suppressed as a result of a -9% decline in visits to museums/art galleries in the North West (a not unexpected decline following their success in 2008 as a result of the Liverpool Capital of Culture event).

Places of worship continued to recover well, reporting strong increases in visitor admissions of +6% in 2009 and +5% in 2008. The years immediately prior to this were a period of more modest increases, which in turn followed years of declining admissions.

Steam/heritage railways reported above average increases in visitor admissions in 2009 (+7%) following a decline in visits of -3% reported in 2008. Similarly, following declines in 2008, both leisure/theme parks (+1%) and country parks (+2%) reported modest increases in visitor admissions in 2009.

Paid	(1095)	70	6	24	+7
England	(1,806)	64	11	25	+5

In a departure from recent years which have generated slightly higher increases among free than paid attractions, visits to paid attractions (+7%) increased at a notably stronger rate than visits to free attractions (+3%) in 2009.

Table 3.3 presents visit trends by free/paid admission within each category type. There are some notable shifts in visits to both free and paid attractions by attraction category type.

Other	Free	(54)	+11
	Paid	(108)	+9
England	Free	(711)	+3
	Paid	(1,095)	+7

The increase in paid attraction visits was driven ostensibly by strong increases in visits to paid admission historic houses/castles (+13%) and gardens (+10%). Visits to paid admission farms and visitor/heritage centres (both +8%) also increased at a rate higher than paid attractions overall.

With visits to museums/art galleries increasing at a more modest rate in 2009, the rate of increase in visits to free attractions was significantly more limited. Visits to free museums and galleries (which make up almost half of all free visitor attractions) increased by only +3% in 2009 compared with +6% in 2008.

Visits to free attractions were boosted by above average increases among free places of worship (+8%) and historic houses/castles (+7%).

3.3 English visit trends 2008-2009 by volume of visits to attractions

Table 3.4 England visit trends 2008-2009 – by volume of visits (%)

Volume of visits	Attractions sample	Increase	No change	Decrease	% Change 09/08

Over 200,000	(192)	69	8	23	+3
England	(1,806)	64	11	25	+5

The trend for visits to migrate towards the larger attractions was somewhat arrested in 2009, with visits to attractions with over 200,000 visitors per annum increasing by only +3%. To an extent, this was driven by a 'corrective' decrease in visits to a number of large attractions in the North West, particularly museums/art galleries – reflecting the Liverpool Capital of Culture 2008 event. A number of other large, free national museums/art galleries also reported notable decreases in visits in 2009.

Visits continued to increase at a slower rate among the very smallest attractions with annual visits of 10,000 or less, although visits in 2009 did increase following a slight decline reported in 2008. Almost a third (31%) of these smallest attractions reported a decrease in visits in 2009 compared with a quarter (25%) among attractions as a whole.

3.4 English visit trends 2008-2009 by geographic location

Table 3.5 England visit trends 2008-2009 – by geographic location (%)

Geographic location	Attractions sample	Increase	No change	Decrease	% Change 09/08
Coastal	(220)	59	11	30	+4
Rural	(860)	67	12	21	+7
Urban	(643)	60	10	30	+3
England	(1,806)	64	11	25	+5

Heavily influenced by the increase in visits to historic houses/castles and gardens in 2009, rural attractions reported the strongest increase in visits at +7%. Only a fifth (21%) of rural attractions reported a decrease in visits in 2009 compared with almost half (44%) in 2008.

In recent years, urban attractions had delivered the most significant increase in visitor admissions, led by London (and in 2008, North West – driven by Liverpool Capital of Culture) and museums/art galleries, with these also tending to be situated in urban locations. The more modest increases reported for London attractions (+3%) and museums/art galleries in 2009 limited the increases in visits to urban attractions.

Visits to coastal attractions also picked up in 2009, increasing by +3%, following a -1% decline in 2008.

3.5 English visit trends 2008-2009 by proportion of overseas visits

Table 3.6 England visit trends 2008-2009 – by proportion of overseas visits (%)

Overseas visits	Attractions sample	Increase	No change	Decrease	% Change 09/08

Over 30%	(88)	69	11	19	+7
England	(1,806)	64	11	25	+5

Reflecting the fact that visits to attractions made by visitors from overseas held up in 2009, visits to those attractions for whom overseas visitors represent over 30% of their admissions increased strongly – by +7%. By way of comparison, visits to these attractions increased by only +*% in 2008.

3.6 English visit trends 2008-2009 by proportion of child visits

Table 3.7 England visit trends 2008-2009 – by proportion of child visits (%)

Child visits	Attractions sample	Increase	No change	Decrease	% Change 09/08

Over 30%	(398)	60	11	29	+4
England	(1,806)	64	11	25	+5

There was little difference in visitor admission increases between attractions with more than 30% of visits made by children (+4%) – perhaps described as ‘family attractions’ - and attractions with fewer than 30% of children (+5%).

4. Visit trends – by origin (2008-2009)

This chapter has been introduced for the first time this year and analyses trends in the number of visits to English attractions made by those living locally / within day trip distance and those from overseas.

The 746 English visitor attractions that provided an estimate of the proportion of visitors living locally / within day trip distance for both 2009 and 2008 reported an average increase of +8% in the number of these visitors in 2009. This is notably higher than the increase in visitor admissions overall (+5%). Therefore, whilst the trend toward overnight stays has undoubtedly had a positive impact upon visits to attractions, day trips have also been instrumental in driving the strong increase in 2009.

Although not increasing at a rate as significant as visitor admissions overall, visits made by overseas visitors have also held up. The 712 English visitor attractions that provided an estimate of the proportion of visitors from overseas reported an average increase of +2% in 2009. This despite challenging conditions within the inbound holiday market, where visits to the UK for holiday purposes or to visit friends/relatives have declined by -3%.

4.1 Visit trends by origin (2008-2009) – by attraction category

Table 4.1 Visit trends by origin (2008-2009) – by attraction category (%)

Places of worship	(48)	+4	(47)	+6
Other	(55)	+13	(52)	+19
England	(746)	+8	(712)	+2

The increase in those living locally / those within day trip distance has been across the board in terms of attraction category, but has been particularly noticeable within the gardens (+31%), historic houses/castles (+17%) and other historic properties (+43%) categories – the first two of which have also delivered the strongest increase in visits overall.

Only workplaces (-9%) and country parks (-2%) experienced declines in the number of visitors living locally / within day trip distance.

Historic houses/castles (+45%) were primarily responsible for driving the increase in visitor admissions made by overseas visitors, reinforcing the notion that heritage is one of the key motivations to visit the UK for overseas visitors.

South West	(124)	+10	(126)	+6
England	(746)	+8	(712)	+2

The increase in visitors living locally / within day trip distance was driven primarily by those visiting London attractions (+33%) and attractions in the East Midlands (+16%), although these visitors increased significantly across all regions with the exception of the West Midlands (-9%) and North West (-6%). Within the North West, perhaps this is evidence that Liverpool Capital of Culture 2008 played a strong role in driving local residents to attractions as well as those from outside the region – these local residents perhaps not having a strong enough reason to return in 2009.

The number of overseas visitors increased most strongly among attractions within Yorkshire/The Humber (+36%), the East (+20%) and North East (+18%) – evidence that they were looking beyond London more often in 2009. By way of comparison, overseas visits to London attractions increased by +3% in 2009.

However, declines were reported, particularly within the North West (-13%) – again evidence that the Liverpool Capital of Culture event drove overseas visitors to attractions within the area in 2008. There were also declines in overseas visits within the South East (-9%) and West Midlands (-4%).

4.3 Visit trends by origin 2008-2009 - by admission type

Table 4.3 Visit trends by origin 2008-2009 – by admission type (%)

Free	(299)	+6	(284)	+2
Paid	(447)	+11	(428)	+4
England	(746)	+8	(712)	+2

In line with visitors to attractions as a whole, visits made by those living locally / within day trip distance and visits made by overseas residents grew more rapidly to attractions with paid admission. Local visitors to paid attractions increased by +11% in 2009 and overseas visitors grew by +4%.

4.4 Visit trends by origin 2008-2009 - by volume of visits to attractions

Table 4.4 Visit trends by origin 2008-2009 – by volume of visits (%)

Over 200,000	(60)	+7	(57)	-1
England	(746)	+8	(712)	+2

The rate of increase in visitors living locally / within day trip distance did not vary significantly in terms of size of attraction. In line with visits overall, local visitors increased at a slightly slower rate among attractions with annual visits of 20,000 or fewer.

However, overseas visits increased more significantly in 2009 among smaller attractions – evidence that overseas visitors have looked beyond the ‘must see’ attractions more often in 2009. This perhaps reflects the changing nature of overseas visitors in 2009, towards visitors from EU origins, many of whom will have experienced the UK (and the ‘must see’ attractions) on previous trips. Further, overseas visits to the largest attractions with over 200,000 visits per annum actually declined by -1% in 2009.

4.5 Visit trends by origin 2008-2009 - by geographical location

Table 4.5 England visit trends 2008-2009 – by geographic location (%)

Geographic location	Local Visitors		Overseas Visitors
	Attractions sample	% Change 09/08	Attractions sample	% Change 09/08

Rural	(385)	+6	(363)	+17
Urban	(266)	+9	(257)	+4
England	(746)	+8	(712)	+2

Whereas visits to rural attractions increased most rapidly in 2009 among visitors as a whole, it was coastal (+9%) and urban (+9%) attractions that most significantly increased visitors who lived locally / within day trip distance. The increase to local visitors to urban attractions was driven most notably by London attractions.

However, overseas visitors did increase most significantly among rural attractions – up by +17% in 2009. Overseas visits to coastal attractions declined by -31% in 2009, indicating that the observed revival of coastal destinations in 2009 has yet to filter through to overseas markets.

5. English Government Office Region visit trends 08-09

This chapter provides an analysis of trends by English Government Office Region (GOR). It is based on 1,806 attractions that provided visits figures for both 2008 and 2009. The trends in these tables should be treated with caution due to the smaller number of attractions when the data is broken down within region.

5.1 Visit trends 2008-2009 by English government office region

Table 5.1 Overall visit trends 2008-2009 – by England GOR (%)

South West	(302)	65	12	23	+6
England	(1,806)	64	11	25	+5

Following the very strong increase in visits to North West attractions of +13% in 2008, driven by the Liverpool Capital of Culture 2008 event, a 'corrective' decline in visits of -1% was reported in 2009 - this small decrease in 2009 perhaps still a positive performance, with visits remaining significantly up on 2007. However, a third (35%) of North West attractions reported a decline in visits in 2009, significantly above England as a whole.

The South East delivered a double digit increase in visits of +10% in 2009, driven by strong increases in visits to historic houses/castles and gardens. With its proliferation of rural and coastal attractions, each of which performed well in 2009, the South West also reported a notable increase in visitor admissions in 2009 (+6%) following small declines in both 2008 and 2007. Attractions in both the South East and South West were perhaps well placed to benefit from the trend towards domestic breaks in 2009, United Kingdom Tourism Survey data indicating that both areas received higher than average increases in staying visitors in 2009.

Visits to East Midlands attractions increased significantly above the average in 2009, by +9%, although this was driven by increases to a relatively small number of large attractions within the region. In fact, the proportion of attractions reporting an increase in visitor admissions within the region (58%) was notably lower than for England overall (64%).

London reported more modest increases in visitor admissions of +3%, reflecting United Kingdom Tourism Survey figures which showed that leisure domestic visits to London did not increase at the rate reported elsewhere in England in 2009.

5.2 Visit trends 2008-2009 by attraction category by English GOR

The trends in this table should be treated with caution since these are based on many regions on very small samples of attractions providing visits data in both 2008 and 2009.

The decrease in visitor admissions within the North West region was driven primarily a fall in visits to museums/art galleries (-9%). This 'corrective' decline followed a huge +34% increase in visits in 2008 during the Liverpool Capital of Culture event. The overall decline in visits to North West attractions was kept minimal by strong performances in 2009 from gardens (+15%), historic houses/castles (+13%) and places of worship (+19%).

The positive increase in visits to South East attractions in 2009 was underpinned by stronger than average increases in visits to historic houses/castles (+15%), gardens (+17%) and museums/art galleries (+12%). Indeed, the South East was one of only four regions to report significant increases in visits to museums/art galleries.

The South West's recovery in 2009 was generated by increases across a broad range of attractions, but still saw its highest growth delivered by historic houses/castles (+10%), other historic properties (+11%) and museums/art galleries (+9%).

Visits to London's attractions grew more modestly across most attractions categories and even declined among farms (-28%) and other historic properties (-10%). However, as in many regions, London's historic houses/castles performed most positively (+11%).

With the exception of the South West, visits to paid attractions increased more rapidly than visits to free attractions in every region. The gap between paid and free attractions was widest within the West Midlands where visits to paid attractions rose by +15%, but visits to free attractions declined by -1%.

The other region to experience a decline in visits to free attractions was the North West (-5%), again reflecting the 'corrective' decline in visits to the free national museums/art galleries which increased their visits so dramatically during the Liverpool Capital of Culture event in 2008.

Across England as a whole, the very largest attractions (over 200,000 visitors per annum) and the very smallest attractions (10,000 or fewer visitors) reported increases in visitor admissions that were lower than average.

This broad pattern was similar across most regions, although there were some notable exceptions.

- In the North East and West Midlands, the smallest attractions performed well, increasing visits by +12%;
- In the East Midlands and South East, the largest attractions also performed well, growing by +15% and +12% respectively;

With the exception of the West Midlands (-1%), visits to rural attractions increased at a similar positive rate across all regions, generating an England-wide increase in visits of +7%. Visits to rural attractions with the East increased particularly strongly (+11%).

Visits to coastal attractions increased across all the relevant regions in 2009, ranging from +15% in Yorkshire/The Humber down to just +1% in the South West. Indeed, whilst the South West had an overall positive year for its attractions (and indeed, for overnight stays taken by England residents), it tended to be the urban attractions (+12%) that increased their visits most within the region – perhaps a reflection of the wet summer weather in the region in 2009.

Along with the South West, visits to urban attractions also increased significantly within the West Midlands (+12%), East Midlands (+11%) and South East (+10%).

6. Adult admission price trends 2008-2009

59% of English attractions responding to the survey charged entry to the main attraction in 2009, the same proportion as observed in 2008 but slightly lower than the proportions reported in 2007 (61%), 2006 (63%) and 2005 (64%).

Some 724 paid attractions that responded to the survey in both 2008 and 2009 provided admission charges in both years. The average adult admission charge increased by 25p in 2009, an increase of +4% - once again not untypical of the annual admission charge increases reported in recent years. Average admission charges for adults across attractions in England broke the £6.00 barrier for the first time in 2009, increasing from £5.96 in 2008 to £6.21 in 2009.

6.1 Adult admission prices 2008-2009 by English GOR

Table 6.1 shows the percentage change in average adult admission charge between 2008 and 2009 within each Government Office Region.

South West	(154)	£5.91	£6.09	+3
England	(724)	£5.96	£6.21	+4

London reported the largest increases in adult admission charges, rising by an average of +11%, from £6.73 to £7.56. As a result, London remained the region whose attractions charged the most on average. All other regions saw admission charges increase around the average of +4% in 2009.

The North East's attractions remained the least expensive to enter for adults, at an average of £4.64 in 2009.

6.2 Adult admission prices 2008-2009 by volume of visits

England	(724)	£5.96	£6.21	+4

Attractions with higher visitor admissions continued to report higher average adult admission charges. Whereas the average adult admission charge in 2009 was £5.12 among attractions with 10,000 or fewer visitors, among attractions with over 200,000 visitors average adult admission was £11.03.

As was the case in 2008, increases in average adult admission charges were similar among small, medium and large attractions in 2009.

England	(724)	£5.96	£6.21	+4

Adult admission charge increases were also similar across most attraction categories. Places of worship stood out as the one category whose paid admission attractions increased their charges by significantly above the national average – by +8% in 2009.

As in previous years, other historic properties reported the lowest average admission charges at £4.31, with museums/art galleries also significantly less than the average at £4.42. The highest average admission charges were recorded for leisure/theme parks (£13.03), wildlife attractions/zoos (£8.89) and steam/heritage railways (£7.11).

6.4 Adult admission prices 2008-2009 by geographic location

Table 6.4 Adult admission prices 2008-2009 (paid admission)–by geographic location (%)

Urban	(165)	£5.18	£5.45	+5
England	(724)	£5.96	£6.21	+4

Coastal attractions increased their admission charges at the lowest rate in 2009, by just +1%, well below the national average of +4%.

Coastal attractions again also recorded the highest average adult admission prices in 2009 (£7.39), higher than both rural (£6.16) and urban (£5.45) attractions.

6.5 Adult admission prices 2008-2009 by proportion of child visits

Table 6.5 Adult admission prices 2008-2009 (paid admission) – by child visits (%)

Over 30%	(134)	£6.29	£6.42	+2
England	(724)	£5.96	£6.21	+4

Admission price increases were also similar among attractions which reported over 30% of visits made by children (+2%) and attractions which reported 30% or fewer visits made by children (+4%).

Attractions with over 30% of visits by children recorded slightly higher than average adult admission prices (£6.42) than those with 30% of fewer child visits (£5.96) in 2009.

7. Revenue & marketing expenditure trends 2008-2009

7.1 Gross revenue trend 2008-2009

Attractions were asked to compare their gross revenue between 2008 and 2009 and detail the overall percentage change. It should be noted that the average changes below are calculated from percentage changes reported per attraction, not changes in actual revenue figures.

1,577 visitor attractions provided information on their gross revenue trend in the 2009 survey.

In line with strong increases in visitor admissions, gross revenues were also reported to have increased by an average of +8% in 2009, notably up on the figures reported in 2008 and 2007 (both +5%). This increase was also slightly above that recorded in each of 2006, 2005 and 2004 (all +7%).

The proportion of attractions reporting a decline in gross revenue in 2009 also fell significantly, from a quarter (26%) in 2008 to just 15% in 2009. This is the lowest proportion of attractions reporting a decline in any of the past five years – 2007 (19%), 2006 (20%), 2005 (21%) and 2004 (22%). Conversely, over half (53%) reported an increase compared with 38% last year and 47% in each of the previous two years.

Table 7.1 Gross revenue trend 2008-2009 – by English GOR (%)

South West	(260)	56	26	18	+9
England	(1,577)	53	33	15	+8

Despite visitor admissions declining slightly in 2009, gross revenue for North West attractions increased by +4%. 42% of all attractions in the region still managed to record growth in gross revenue during the year. Whilst the smallest increase of all regions, this nevertheless perhaps demonstrates the lasting legacy of the Liverpool Capital of Culture 2008 event – both visitor admissions and gross revenue significantly up on 2007.

Despite the lower than average increase in visitor admissions to London attractions in 2009, gross revenue increased by more than the national average (by +10%). This perhaps reflects the greater than average increase in admission charges at London attractions in 2009. However, 19% of London attractions reported a decline in gross revenue, a higher proportion than any other region.

However, gross revenue increases were highest overall in the West Midlands, whose attractions reported an average increase of +15%. Only 9% of attractions reported a decline in gross revenue, the lowest of all regions. The North East (+11%), South East (+11%) and South West (+9%) also reported greater than average increases in gross revenue in 2009.

Across the different attraction categories, the variation in gross revenue reported was again significant in 2009, ranging from +29% for leisure/theme parks to +2% for places of worship. Reflecting the strong performance of historic houses/castles in 2009, gross revenue for these attractions also increased significantly above average (by +13%). Over two-thirds (68%) of historic houses/castles reported an increase in gross revenue compared with just over half (53%) among attractions as a whole.

Other attractions categories reporting significantly higher than average proportions of their attractions having increased their gross revenue were steam/heritage railways (77%), leisure/theme parks (69%) and gardens (65%).

Gross revenue for museums/art galleries was up by just +4% in 2009, reflecting the lower than average increases in visitor admissions. A fifth (20%) of museums/art galleries experienced a decline in gross revenue, a higher proportion than any other attraction category.

Paid attractions reported an +11% increase in gross revenue in 2009, a significantly higher increase than for free attractions (+4%), although this reflects the similar differential increase in visitor admissions between charging and free attractions.

Note: percentages read across

Unlike visitors admissions (where the very smallest and very largest categories of attractions experienced the slowest rates of growth), gross revenues increased at similar rates regardless of attraction size.

However, these figures mask the trend which indicates that the larger the attraction is, the more likely it is to have reported an increase in gross revenue in 2009. Only 43% of attractions with fewer than 10,000 visitors per annum reported an increase in gross revenue in 2009, compared with 71% of attractions with 100,001-200,000 visitors and 66% of attractions with over 200,000 visitors. The largest attractions were also much less likely to report declines than the smaller attractions. The implication is that the majority of the largest attractions, whilst perhaps generating only modest increases in gross revenue in 2009, were at least likely to have increased their revenue. However, the performance of the smaller attractions was somewhat more volatile – some generating large increases and some declines in gross revenue.

In line with the strong increase in visitor admissions to rural attractions, these attractions also reported the highest average increase in gross revenues (+11%). 60% of rural attractions reported an increase in gross revenue in 2009 compared with just 52% of coastal and 41% of urban attractions.

However, gross revenues to both coastal (+6%) and urban attractions (+5%) also increased.

Visitor admissions to 'family' attractions with over 30% of its visits accounted for by children did not increase any more significantly than those attractions with 30% or fewer child visitors in 2009. However, gross revenues for these 'family' attractions did increase more significantly, rising by an average of +12%.

7.2 Marketing expenditure trend 2008-2009

This section examines the movement in marketing spend at attractions between 2008 and 2009. Attractions were asked to indicate whether spend had increased, decreased or remained similar compared with 2008. 1,581 attractions answered this question. Actual expenditure was not sought.

Little has changed since 2008 in terms of the proportions of attractions increasing or decreasing their marketing expenditure. One in five (21%) attractions indicated an increase in marketing spend in 2009 11% a decrease. This was very similar to that recorded in the past five years:

- 2008 (21% recorded an increase and 11% a decrease)
- 2007 (22% recorded an increase and 12% a decrease)
- 2006 (24% recorded an increase and 11% a decrease)
- 2005 (25% recorded an increase and 10% a decrease)
- 2004 (25% recorded an increase and 13% a decrease)

Note: percentages read across

Leisure/theme parks (39%), steam/heritage railways (34%), farms (33%) and wildlife attractions/zoos (32%) were all significantly more likely to report marketing spend increases than the national average.

Conversely, country parks (12%), other historic properties (14%), places of worship (17%) and museums/art galleries (18%) were least likely to have increased their marketing spend in 2009 – as was the case in 2008. Historic houses/castles appeared to have increased their visitor admissions without a significant proportion increasing their marketing spend in 2009, only 18% reporting that their expenditure in this area had increased since 2008.

Table 7.9 Movement in spend on marketing – by English GOR 2008-2009 (%)

Region	Attractions Sample	Increase	Similar	Decrease
North West	(159)	28	62	11

South East	(292)	17	72	11
South West	(261)	25	63	13
England	(1,581)	21	68	11

Attractions in the North West (28%) were most likely to have increased their marketing spend in 2009, perhaps seeking to ensure that the success of 2008 be sustained in the absence of the Liverpool Capital of Culture 2008 event. Attractions in both London (27%) and the South West (25%) were also more likely than average to have increased their marketing spend, as was also the case in 2008.

Marketing spend was perhaps tightest in Yorkshire/The Humber, generating both the lowest proportion of attractions reporting an increase in marketing spend (16%) and the highest proportion reporting a decrease in spend (14%).

As reported in recent years, paid attractions (22%) continued to be more likely to increase their marketing expenditure than free attractions (19%), although the gap has narrowed compared with recent years (25% of paid attractions in 2008 versus 17% of free attractions).

As in 2008, changes to marketing spend once again did not vary significantly according to size of attraction. Changes to marketing spend among attractions with over 200,000 visits per annum tended to be slightly higher, 27% of these attractions reporting an increase in spend compared with 21% of attractions as a whole.

8. Provision of services in 2009

For the first time, attractions taking part in the 2009 survey were asked about the services that they offered across five dimensions:

- Online;
- Facilities;
- Interpretation;
- Events;
- Membership scheme.

1,617 attractions responded to this question, with provision of services ranging from 78% of attractions across England that provided a website (meaning that almost a quarter still do not have their own website) to just 9% who provide audio guides. As Table 8.1 below illustrates, provision of services varied significantly by attraction category.

Provision of online ticket booking facilities remained fairly low, with only 18% of paid admission attractions offering this facility.

Two-thirds (67%) of attractions offered a retail shop and almost half (48%) offered a café/restaurant. 60% had some form of education facility provision or education events.

Within interpretation, provision of guided tours was widespread, particularly within the historic property sector, with over half (58%) of all attractions making these available to visitors. Provision of costumed interpretation (12%) and audio guides (9%) were at significantly lower levels. Only a third (38%) of attractions offered a souvenir guide.

The quarterly England Attractions Monitor during 2009 established the growing importance of public events for England's attractions and this was reaffirmed by findings from this survey, with almost half (49%) offering public events in 2009. Further, high proportions of attractions also offered other revenue generating services outside core public opening times - a third (34%) offering public venue hire and a quarter (28%) corporate venue hire.

The England Attractions Monitor has also highlighted the growing importance of member schemes and once again, this survey offers further evidence of this. Half (49%) of all attractions offered some form of member scheme in 2009, whether this was season tickets, memberships or friends schemes.

Provision of a website was widespread across most attraction categories, although most categories reported notable minorities that still did not offer a website. In particular, 43% of workplaces and 33 of places of worship (33%) did not have their own website.

Online booking facilities were still unusual within the sector as a whole, although leisure/theme parks (53%), steam/heritage railways (46%) and, to a lesser extent, wildlife attractions/zoos (21%) were considerably ahead of the curve.

In terms of facilities, there were some attractions categories that were well ahead of the curve in terms of providing retail shops and cafés/restaurants:

- Farms were highly likely to provide both, as were leisure/theme parks, steam/heritage railways and wildlife attractions/zoos;
- Museums/art galleries were highly likely to offer a retail shop, but less likely than average to offer a café/restaurant – as were workplaces;
- Conversely, both country parks and gardens were likely to offer a café/restaurant, but less likely than average to offer a retail shop.

There was also great variation in provision of education facilities, with country parks (80%), wildlife attractions/zoos (80%), farms (75%) and museums/art galleries (71%) all significantly more likely than attractions overall to offer these facilities.

The heritage sector leads the way in interpretation, with historic houses/castles being way more likely than any other attraction category to offer guided tours (82%), souvenir guides (70%), costumed interpretation (25%) and audio guides (18%). Provision was also high among other historic properties and gardens.

Provision of events was notable across most attraction categories, although historic houses/castles and country parks led the way in terms of public events – both events themselves and venue hire. Farms, leisure/theme parks and workplaces were somewhat further behind on provision of public events.

Conversely, in terms of corporate events, leisure/theme parks lead the way (58%), with historic houses/castle (43%) and wildlife attractions/zoos (40%) also significantly more likely to report corporate event provision than average.

Provision of member schemes varied enormously, from almost three-quarters of wildlife attractions/zoos and steam/heritage railways to a quarter or fewer of places of worship and workplaces. Farms, gardens and historic houses/gardens were also significantly more likely than average to offer member schemes.

Provision of certain services also varied significantly by size of attraction. In terms of online services, website provision was high with the exception of the large number of the very smallest attractions with fewer than 10,000 visitors per annum. A third (34%) of these attractions still did not offer a website in 2009.

Online booking facilities were the domain of only the very largest attractions. 41% of those with over 200,000 visitors and 27% of those with 100,001-200,000 visitors offered online booking, with provision tailing off considerably among attractions smaller than this.

Provision of retail shop, café/restaurant and education facilities was generally high among attractions with over 20,000 visitors, but began to reduce significantly among attractions with 10,001-20,000 visitors and dramatically among those with fewer than 10,000 visitors.

Within interpretation, provision of souvenir guides, costumed interpretation and audio guides also declined as attraction sizes reduced. Indeed, provision of audio guides was dramatically higher among the very largest attractions with over 200,000 visitors (20%). However, provision of guided tours did not vary significantly by size of attraction – something that the smallest attractions were perhaps able to offer at relatively low cost, perhaps through volunteers.

Corporate event provision declined steadily as attraction size reduced, with the greatest step change in provision coming once attractions reached the 100,000 or more visitor mark. Public venue hire also decreased as attractions became smaller, although the proportion offering only tailed off significantly once annual visit volume fell below 10,000 visitors. However, provision of public events was notable regardless of size of attraction, with even a third (38%) of these smallest attractions offering some public events.

Provision of member schemes was also significant among attractions with over 10,000 visitors per annum – over half offering among these attractions. However, once again, provision tails off significantly among the very smallest attractions, with only a third (32%) of attractions with fewer than 10,000 visitors per annum offering some form of member scheme in 2009.

Region was not a significant discriminator of services provision. Where differences did exist, these were often due to the preponderance of certain attraction categories within the region or where attractions had a disproportionate number of large or small attractions. London, for example, with its abundance of large attractions, tended to report higher than average provision of services across many areas (although member schemes were notably lower than average, driven by the larger than average proportion of attractions which generate significant overseas visitors).

The North East did buck this pattern somewhat, with greater provision of services than one have expected given the size and nature of its attractions. In particular, provision of retail shops and cafes/restaurants was more prevalent in this region than any other.

Provision of the majority of services was significantly more likely to be present among attractions with paid admission than free attractions. Only education facilities/events and public events were as likely to be provided by free attractions as those with paid admission.

The difference is perhaps most striking for provision of member schemes, where two-thirds (63%) of paid admission attractions offered this facility, but only a quarter (27%) of free attractions did so. With all the benefits that a member scheme can generate for even free attractions, there is perhaps an opportunity for the industry to assist these operators in the development of their own schemes.

In terms of provision of online and retail, catering and education facilities, provision was significantly more likely among ‘family’ attractions, where the proportion of child visits is in excess of 30%. Provision of costumed interpretation was also notably higher.

However, for other services, provision tends to be similar regardless of the proportion of child visits. Indeed, guided tours and souvenir guides were more likely to be provided at attractions where fewer than 30% of its visitors were children.

As table 8.6 overleaf illustrates, most services were more likely to be provided by attractions where overseas visitors were in excess of 30%, reflecting the fact that these also tended to be the larger attractions.

However, retail shops, cafes/restaurants and education facilities/events were each more likely to be provided by attractions with fewer than 30% of its visits accounted for by overseas visitors.

Member schemes were also far less likely to be offered by attractions with over 30% of its visits accounted for by overseas visitors (37%) than those where overseas visitors accounted for less than 30% of its visits (48%).

9. Trends in the number of visits to England attractions 1989-2009

9.1 Trends in number of visits to visitor attractions 1989-2009

As responding attractions tend to vary between years, operators are asked in each survey year to provide the number of visits for both the survey year and the previous year. This enables the trend between any two years to be calculated based on the same attractions.

Table 9.1 shows the indexed trend based on the visits (see Table 9.3) given by responding attractions. Because the number of responding attractions differs each year (see Table 9.2), the percentage change between any two years is applied each time to the previous year's index to take account of the varying sample sizes each year.

Table 9.3 shows the number of visits to responding attractions. It does not include estimates of non-responding attractions. Therefore these figures do not represent the total market.

Table 9.3 Number of visits to responding England attractions 1989-2009 (millions)

Table 9.3 shows the number of visits to responding attractions. (Note: it does not include estimates of non-responding attractions. Therefore these figures do not represent the total market).

10. Visits to individual attractions

This section of the report lists visits figures for 2009 by responding attractions, together with topline trends. Comparative figures for 2008, 2007, 2006 and 2005 are also shown. It should be noted that this report lists individual visits figures for attractions which authorised publication only. Country parks have been excluded from the list of major paid and free attractions, as counting methods are liable to considerable variation.

There are three sections:

- Major attractions in England by category type
- Major attractions by Government Office Region (GOR)
- Comprehensive alphabetical list of all attractions by category type within GOR

Visits are listed under twelve broad attraction categories, detailed overleaf.

The report also contains an alphabetical index of attractions which indicates the category, GOR, county and district in which an attraction can be found.

Table 10.1 Attraction categories

Category	Abbreviation	Description
Country Parks	CP	Country parks and forest parks
Farms	F	Farms, rare breeds, shire horse centres and farm animals
Gardens	G	Gardens, arboretums and botanical gardens

Steam/Heritage Railways	R	Steam railways and heritage railways
Visitor/Heritage Centres	VC	Visitor centres and heritage centres
Wildlife Attractions	WI	Nature reserves, wetlands, wildlife trips, safari parks, zoos, aquariums and aviaries
Workplaces	WP	Distilleries, vineyards, breweries and industrial or craft premises
Places of Worship	WO	Cathedrals, churches and other places of worship
Other	O	Attractions that do not fit into any of the categories outlined above

Visits Figures

These are recorded in the columns '2005', '2006', '2007', '2008' and '2009'.

Data may not have been obtained for years 2005, 2006, 2007 or 2008. In this case

- 'DK' indicates that data were not provided

Estimates

Where visits are estimated by attractions in 2009, these are shown as an 'E' following the visits figures.

Percentage Change

Only the percentage change 2009/2008 is presented in the tables. This is recorded in the column entitled '% 08/09'. 'n/a' means that this is not applicable e.g. data was not provided/not available for both years.

Admission Charge

The standard adult admission charge for the main attraction in high season is recorded in the column entitled 'Entry'. 'F' indicates admission to the main attraction is free of charge

A. Survey of visits to visitor attractions questionnaire

SURVEY OF VISITS TO VISITOR ATTRACTIONS 2009

Please help VisitEngland and the Regional Tourist Organisations establish trends in the attractions' sector in 2009 by taking part in our major annual survey, conducted by BDRC. ALL ATTRACTIONS COMPLETING THIS QUESTIONNAIRE WILL RECEIVE A PERSONALISED REPORT BENCHMARKING THEIR PERFORMANCE.

All information you provide in this questionnaire will be treated in strictest confidence (please see Section 6.1 to grant permission to publish visitor numbers)

Please complete the questions by ticking the relevant box or by writing on the line provided. Please return the questionnaire by 30th April 2010 in the pre-paid envelope provided. Please refer to the enclosed guidelines when completing the questionnaire.

We are always trying to improve the quality and quantity of responses to the survey by providing as much flexibility as possible to encourage participation. We now offer an option for completing the survey online via a secure website. Simply visit: www.visitenglanddirectonline.com and login using the User Name and Password details printed below.

If any of the contact information printed below is incorrect or missing, please write in the correct details.
