- In 2016, 35% of all visits to the UK from Belgium were made for holidays, 27% for business visits, followed by 24% to visit family and/or friends and 13% for miscellaneous visits (above average).
- 80% of holiday visits from Belgium to the UK in 2015 (excl. UK nationals) were made by repeat visitors. These repeat visitors came on average between three and four times in the past decade and spent £1,240 in the UK in total, compared to an average European holiday repeat visitor spending £1,626 in the same time frame.

Journey purpose trend (visits 000s)

- Holidays continue to lead journey purposes in terms of volume. 40% of spending came courtesy of holiday visitors and 28% from business visits in 2016.
- Miscellaneous visits have seen the strongest growth out of all journey purposes looking at the 2012-2016 period (16%), followed by business visits (14%), but still fall short of pre-financial crisis records. At the same time visits to friends and/or relatives grew by 12% and set a new record in 2015 with 249,000 visits, almost matched in 2016.
- 95% of those coming to the UK for business visits (excl. expats) had been to the UK before as had 92% of those coming to visit friends or relatives in the UK.

1.1 Key statistics: seasonality

Seasonality 2016

- In 2016, 32% of Belgian visits to the UK were made in the second quarter, followed by 27% in the summer. Almost one in four visits from Belgium were made in the last quarter and almost one in five happened between January and March.
- The second quarter has long led Belgian visits by volume. The number of visits in the summer months was fairly stable over the last few years. The October to December period was almost as popular but saw a decline in 2016.

Duration of stay trend (visits 000s)

- Belgian travellers tend to favour shorter trips when travelling to the UK. Short trips of one to three nights lead Belgian visits by volume by far. Trips without an overnight stay and those which lasted between four and seven nights were equally as numerous in 2016.

- Two forms of accommodation dominate the picture with 37% of Belgian visitor nights spent at a ‘hotel/guest house’ and 34% spent staying for free with relatives or friends in 2016. All other types of accommodation accounted for a share of 6% or less of Belgian nights spent in the UK in the same year.

1.1 Key statistics: purchase of package tours

Proportion of visits that are bought as part of a package or all-inclusive tour in 2016

To be defined as a package, a trip must be sold at an inclusive price covering both fares to and from the UK and the cost of at least some accommodation. While some respondents may not know the separate costs of their fares and their hotel because they bought several air tickets and several sets of hotel accommodation from their travel agent, the ONS definition of a package is that the costs cannot be separated.

1.2 Visitor demographics

Visitor characteristics

• There are nearly four times more male than female business visitors but leisure visitors have a more even gender distribution.
• Four-in-five Belgian holiday visitors are making a repeat visit to Britain (excl. UK nationals).
• Most visits from Belgian residents to the UK were made by Belgian nationals (76%), 9% by British nationals and 15% nationals of another country.
• More visitors come from Brussels than from any other part of Belgium.
• 95% of visitors from Belgium are ‘likely’ or ‘extremely likely’ to recommend Britain for a holiday or short-break.

2.2 Consumer trends

- 82% of Belgians aged 18 or over like to go on holidays based on a survey by Incidence conducted in December 2016.
- Many have a preference for spending their summer holidays by the sea (50%), followed by holidays in the mountains (17%) and city breaks (15%).
- Belgians like to prepare once their trip is booked, gathering information about sights and what can be visited in the holiday destination.
- The number of Belgians flying to their holiday destinations continues to increase over the longer term, although almost three in five still take their car to go on holidays. (ABTO/WES research).
- 54% of tourist nights spent in Belgium in 2016 were booked by domestic travellers.
- The availability of WiFi during their holiday is essential for more than half of Belgians’ accommodation choice, followed by air conditioning and a swimming pool.
- Belgians have an above-average propensity to consider aspects of sustainability and environmentally friendly measures when making their destination choice.

Sources: Statbel June 2017, FISA-Grayling February 2017.
2.2 Consumer trends: reasons for holidays

Main reasons for going on holiday

- Amongst the main reasons for going on a holiday for Belgian travellers are: sun/beach, nature, visiting family/friends/relatives and culture followed by city trips. About one in five stated sport-related activities, which is well above average.

Reasons to return to the same destination for a holiday

- When asked about reasons which would make them return to a destination, 51% of Belgians value natural features and just over two in five the quality of accommodation whilst about one third stated cultural and historical attractions and the general level of prices. Almost one in four mentioned the welcome for tourists.

Source: Flash Eurobarometer 432 by EC 2016: What were your main reasons for going on holiday in 2015? Firstly? And then? and Which of the following would make you go back to the same place for a holiday? Firstly? And then?
2.2 Consumer trends: sustainability/environment

Role of sustainable/environmentally-friendly aspects when choosing travel destinations

- At least one aspect
  - None of these aspects played a role when I chose my travel destination
  - The hotel/accommodation had introduced environmentally-friendly tourism practices (e.g. energy/water saving measures, recycling, fair-trade food, etc.)
  - The local destination (city, village, region) had introduced sustainable/environmentally-friendly practices (e.g. measures to protect natural and cultural resources, to reduce the environmental impact of tourism, or to involve the local population)
  - The destination was accessible by a means of transport with low impact on the environment
  - The destination or service used (e.g. accommodation, attraction) was certified with a label indicating sustainable/environmentally-friendly practices

2.3 Booking and planning

- More than half of Belgians book their holidays online. Despite the large proportion of online bookings, two in five Belgians worry about potential risks when they make their booking on the Internet.
- Whilst the majority of Belgians do not use the services of a travel agency, those who do were most likely to do so for the following reasons: if their destination of choice is less common and/or exotic and if they were booking a package tour. Almost half of those Belgians who consult travel agents value professional advice, more than two in five go there for the quality of the service and a similar proportion look for information about destinations for holiday ideas (often an online booking follows).
- More than one in four Belgians book their holidays between three and five months in advance and about one in five six to eight months prior to the trip.

2.3 Booking and planning: booking channels

Methods used to book a holiday

- More than half of Belgian respondents are comfortable using online commercial services to make their holiday bookings, slightly more than the European average (50%). Almost two in five use services such as tour operator or airline websites.
- 17% made a booking over the counter with a travel agent and 16% booked their holidays over the phone, broadly in line with the European average.
- More than one fourth made their booking through someone they know, a higher proportion than the European average (16%).
- More than one in four Belgians (28%) book their holidays between three and five months in advance of their trip.

2.4 Reaching the consumer

- Recommendations from friends, colleagues or relatives are the most influential source for travel decision-making, with more than half of Belgians saying these are important when making their travel plans, closely followed by websites in general. Almost two in five state that personal experience is important.
- Less than one in ten use paid guidebooks or magazines, broadly in line with the European average.
- The use of smartphones to research information and look for holiday inspiration is becoming increasingly important.
- The importance of social media as a source of information remains rather limited for the Belgians. For holidays longer than 4 nights, only 6% of Belgians use social media as the most important source of information. For tour operator holidays this is 7% and for long trips 14%.
- Belgians devote more time to the so-called traditional media activities than to those online. On average, Belgians spend almost 6 hours daily on the combined use of TV, radio, written press and video games vs. a little over 2 hours spent online.

2.4 Reaching the consumer: broadcast media, radio, newspapers and magazines

Broadcast media
- Belgians watch an average of 2.5 hours of TV a day. Younger generations of Belgians increasingly stream TV programmes, with TV channels offering their own online services in response to popular streaming services like Netflix. Many use other devices while watching TV e.g. use their mobile etc.
- Popular French-spoken TV channels include (by market share in 2016): RTL-TVI, La Une, Nickelodeon, AB3, National Geographic FR, Cartoon Network, Club RTL, Plug RTL and La Deux.
- Popular Flemish-spoken TV channels include (by market share in 2016): Eén, Ketnet, VTM, VIER, NickJr., VIJF, Canvas and Vitaya.

Radio
- Popular French-spoken radio stations include: Radio Contact, Bel RTL, VivaCité, Radio Nostalgie, Classic 21, NRJ and La Première.
- Popular Flemish-spoken radio stations include: Radio 2, Studio Brussel, Q-Music, MNM, JOE fm, Radio 1 and Nostalgie.

Newspapers/Magazines
- There are considerable differences in the developments of the French and Flemish spoken newspaper markets in Belgium. Whilst circulation of French titles has declined over the last decades to almost 330,500, Flemish titles declined less sharply and maintain a large circulation in 2016 with just under 900,000. As a result there has been consolidation in the newspaper landscape with now 15 newspaper titles in Belgium.
- Popular Flemish titles: Het Laaste Nieuws (274,832), Het Nieuwsblad (238,804), De Standaard (100,053), De Morgen (54,750), De Tijd (41,877), regionals: Het Belang van Limburg (93,414) and Gazet van Antwerpen (87,834).
- Popular French titles: Le Soir (65,659), Sudpresse (90,220), L'Avenir (81,095), La Dernière Heure (42,015), La Libre Belgique (35,524), L'Echo (15,964).
- Free daily in both language areas, Metro (110,594 in Flanders, 98,582 in Wallonia).
- Many newspapers now also have digital titles and online presence. The same is true for the Belgian magazine landscape.

2.4 Reaching the consumer: online media and social media

Online media
- Belgians devote more time to so-called traditional media activities than to those online. On average, Belgians spend almost 6 hours daily on the combined use of TV, radio, written press and video games vs. a little over 2 hours spent online, less in many other markets.
- In Belgium 61% of 16- to 64-year-olds now have a smartphone, and 55% connect to the internet with their mobile device. The use of the mobile device has surpassed that of the PC/laptop as the main source for Internet consumption in most other countries but in Belgium 91% still use them to connect. About half of Belgians own a tablet.
- Most traditional media now have digital outlets.

Social media
- Belgians are keen social media users across all age groups (80% of Internet users 16-74 years of age, the third-highest proportion in the EU and higher than the EU average of 63%). Among younger people between 16 and 24, almost all (97%) use social media and in the older age group with Internet users aged between 65 and 74 years, more than average engage with social media (56% in Belgium compared to below 50% in almost all EU member states).
- Facebook was by far the most used social media platform in Belgium in 2017 (35%), followed by Youtube (15%), Google+, Twitter, LinkedIn and Instagram.
- Fewer Belgians actually post about their lives rather than consume information shared by others. On Facebook, about a third post photos and status updates and roughly half read articles and follow the news.
- The importance of social media as a source of information remains rather limited for the Belgians. For holidays longer than four nights, only 6% of Belgians use social media as the most important source of information. For tour operator holidays this is 7% and for long trips 14%.

2.4 Reaching the consumer: influences

Influences on decision-making

- Recommendations of friends, colleagues or relatives
- Total 'Websites'
- Websites collecting and presenting comments, reviews and ratings from travellers
- Personal experience
- Websites run by service provider or by destination
- Counters of travel agencies and tourism offices
- Social media pages (for accommodation, restaurants, transport companies, etc.)
- Newspaper, radio, TV
- Paid for guidebooks and magazines

Chapter 3: Access and travel trade
3. Access and travel trade

- Access to Britain is easy. 56% of Belgian visits were made via the Channel Tunnel (which links Britain and France), followed by 26% by ferry and 17% by plane.
- Annual airline seat capacity has grown slightly in recent years, however, the Eurostar remains the preferred means of transport for many Belgians when visiting the UK. Brussels Airlines and British Airways provided about ¾ of annual flight seat capacity in 2017.
- The travel industry in Belgium is made up of tour operators, carriers and ticket consolidators, business travel, MICE and travel agents.
- There are hardly any Britain-specialists. Britain product can mainly be found in:
  1. City breaks by major tour operators (London dominates, Edinburgh, excursions across nations and regions of the UK)
  2. Coach touring round the country by major tour operators
  3. Short-term language courses by student operators and educational operators

Source: Apex Rdc 2017: non-stop flights only, International Passenger Survey by ONS
3.1 Access: key facts

- 56% of Belgian visits were made via the Channel Tunnel (which links Britain and France), followed by 26% by ferry and 17% by plane.
- A journey on the Eurostar which links Brussels to London non-stop takes roughly 2 hours and data from the IPS shows that it is the most frequently-chosen option for visiting the UK. The trains run frequently with roughly 10 trains per day.
- Flight seat capacity started growing slightly again in recent years after a sharp decline had taken place since its peak a decade ago. In addition to the financial crisis which is likely to have caused softening demand at that time, journey times on the Eurostar had been reduced which could also have contributed to passengers frequently choosing the Tunnel.
- Belgian visitors departing Britain by air currently pay £13 in Air Passenger Duty.

More than half of Belgian visits are made through the Channel Tunnel.

3.2 Travel trade: general overview

- The travel trade in Belgium has mainly consolidated around two key players: TUI and Thomas Cook. There are some smaller niche operators and associations such as walking groups, cultural clubs, schools, universities and evening colleges will organise holidays for their members. The key centres for the travel trade are Brussels and Flanders although trade is spread across the country.

- Tour operators (TOs) mostly sell their products through travel agencies, which continue to be key in Belgian distribution. Increasingly, tour operators also sell directly to the consumer through the Internet (although for holidays to Britain the number of direct sales tends not to be significant). Coach operators usually sell their coach tours through their own or independent travel agencies.

- The number of group operators is limited in Belgium but they are – especially the school group operators - very important to Britain and represent a high volume of visits. These operators tend to split into the youth, seniors and special interest segments. Belgium has a lot of mid-size travel agents who book directly with UK suppliers for bespoke luxury travel packages.

- Planning cycle: less relevant to online tour operators, traditional operators with print brochures often need programmes/rates for winter programmes by March/April and those for the summer by August/September.

3.2 Travel trade: practical information

General practical information:

• Business hours are usually 09:00 – 17:00 as standard.

• Dress code: Business dress tends to vary by business from formal to smart casual. Belgians like to dress up in formal wear for business events and galas.

• Business Meeting Etiquette: Appointments are mandatory and should be made well in advance. Reconfirm your appointment about a few days before your visit. Be punctual as it is important to Belgians. Please call your contact if you get delayed and offer an explanation.

• Shake hands with everyone present when you arrive and again on departure. Be careful of using first names as they are usually reserved for family and close friends. Please address your contacts using the last name unless invited to greet them by their first name. If your meeting is in French, please make sure you address people as “vous” not “tu” on the first appointment. You should wait until invited before using someone’s first name and “tu”.

• Follow up quickly on any action points.

• Communication tends to be formal and you should expect written communication, both to back up decisions and to maintain a record of decisions and discussions. Following the established protocol is critical to building and maintaining business relationships. Once a firm business relationship has been established it is appropriate to relax rules and to become more informal.

• Business often is hierarchical and decision-making is held at the top of the company. Final decisions are translated into comprehensive action steps.
3.2 Travel trade: sales calls

Sales calls
Belgian tour operators tend to be spread across Belgium but due to the relatively small size of the country it is possible to do more than one visit in a day. VisitBritain recommends that you take the following steps:

• Most Belgian trade professionals have good command of English.

• It is still appreciated if you can provide information in your contact’s language, wherever possible. Make sure to provide French speakers with French information and Flemish agents with information in their language. Please avoid producing literature or documents in French when talking to a Flemish agent or vice versa unless explicitly invited to do so. Belgians tend to like printed material so please provide maps and printed brochures where possible.

• Online tour operators are not bound to a planning cycle. Those tour operators who produce print brochures are best contacted before the summer holidays (March/April) for winter programmes and programmes/ rates should be available by August/September for summer programmes.

• It is best to avoid scheduling in meetings in July and August, the week before Easter or during the week between Christmas and New Year.

• Keep in touch with VisitBritain; let us know about your progress. Regular market intelligence is essential for our future plans and activities.

• It is also important to note that a significant number of the key Belgian trade attend the VisitBritain’s ExploreGB workshop & VisitScotland Expo. Please contact VisitBritain London for details of those attending. Some operators also visit World Travel Market and ITB.

3.2 Travel trade: practical information

Hospitality etiquette

If there is the opportunity it is definitely a good idea to take your Belgian business partner out for a meal – either to build up a relationship or to thank for business given in the past. Food and drink tend to be very important for Belgians. They appreciate a good lunch or dinner. Here are some practical tips to help you plan this:

- Credit cards are usually accepted in all restaurants (only double check with the small ones) VISA and Mastercard are most accepted but in some restaurants American Express cards are not accepted.
- Arrive on time and if possible, before the invite, as punctuality indicates reliability.
- If you order water you will be asked if you want mineral still or sparkling; the ‘carafe d’eau’ (tap water in the French-spoken part) is another common option, but maybe not for a business invitation.
- Bread is always served and you can order refills any time.
- Some Belgians drink wine with their meals, although not always at lunch time.
- Service charge and VAT are included in the price, therefore tipping is limited. Tips are only given if you are happy with the service provided and rarely more than €5.

3.3 Caring for the Consumer

Caring for the Consumer:

- Belgians tend to highly appreciate good value for money, often choosing accommodation in the three to four star range. Many Belgians are keen to hear about luxury upgrades (e.g. to 5* accommodation) if available on booking.
- Food is one of the great passions of many Belgians. Their cooking tends to be highly refined and involves careful preparation, attention to detail, and the use of fresh ingredients. It varies by region and is heavily influenced by locally grown produce.
- Many Belgians tend to have lower than average perceptions of British food and drink but are often interested in trying local food and drink whilst visiting. Enjoying a full English breakfast often is on the list of things to do in the destination.
- The Belgian people have a tendency to socialise in their homes and restaurants – their home is usually reserved to family and friends. An invitation to join them for a meal is a sincere compliment. Meals are sociable occasions and they take their time to enjoy them.

Breakfast in Belgium often is a light meal of bread, cereal, yogurt, and coffee or hot chocolate. Lunch consists of a salad or a sandwich usually followed by a piece of fruit or yogurt.

Dinner is generally the main meal of the day: three courses are common with the first course, a main dish followed by dessert (often fruit). Bread is expected to be served throughout the meal. “Bon appétit” for French speakers or “Smakelijk” for the Flemish is wished to everyone around the table at the start of the meal.

Many Belgians are comfortable with making payments by credit card.
